Life in ‘The Suit’

Former mascots dish on their grrrrreat experiences as Princeton’s Tiger

When Rob Dyer ’93 was a sophomore, actor Jimmy Stewart ’32 was honored with the Woodrow Wilson Award. At the reception, Dyer walked in uninvited, went up to Stewart, and threw an arm around him. Nobody stopped him; in fact, people took photos. Dyer was, after all, in his tiger suit — the one that turned him into the Princeton Tiger at athletic events.

“[Stewart] got up and turned around and said, ‘Oh, Tiger, how you doing there?’” Dyer recalled. “And I said, ‘Just fine, Jimmy! How are you?’ And he goes, ‘Well, I’m doing all right.’ And he gave me a hug, and I thought, ‘Oh my goodness — I have to call my mother! I just hugged Jimmy Stewart!’” Dyer called that moment “a highlight of my career in the suit.”

Leea Driskell ’17 also had a brush with notable alumni while playing the Tiger. She donned the suit for a day during the NCAA Women’s Division I Basketball Championship last year — and at one point almost knocked over Supreme Court Justices Sonia Sotomayor ’76 and Elena Kagan ’81 as they passed behind the Princeton Band. The suit “is intended for someone much taller than 5 feet 3 inches [Driskell’s height], so I didn’t see them walking behind me,” she explained.

“It was also absurdly hot inside the
That same playful spirit characterized Jean Telljohann ’81’s experiences in the suit. She remembers mock-sparring with the Columbia Lion. On one occasion, a young couple handed her their baby for a picture. “It did strike me odd that they would hand their baby to a total stranger!” she said.

At the same time, people sometimes forgot there was a real person in the suit, leading to difficult situations. At one basketball game, Dyer had to sternly remind a boy who repeatedly punched him that there was a full-grown college kid in the suit. Telljohann remembers being hit by a member of the opposing band as the latter ran across the field. Rainwater had a more serious run-in with an opposing college’s band: During one football game, she was attacked by several musicians and had to go to the hospital afterward to be treated for her injuries.

“That was embarrassing,” Rainwater said. After The Daily Princetonian reported the incident, some people wrote in to say it was wrong for Princeton to have a girl in the costume. Other than that, however, both Rainwater and Telljohann said that gender had little effect on their experiences in the suit.

The mascots interviewed have mostly left their days as the Tiger in the past, though in 2013 Rainwater published Tigering: Memoir of an Ivy League Mascot, which chronicles her four years as mascot. Telljohann has moved on to another role with a long tradition — for years, she has served as a P-rade marshal at Reunions. And though Dyer, now a pastor, hasn’t been in the tiger suit since his days at Princeton, he sometimes sees connections between the work he did in it and the work he does now.

“When I got to be the Tiger, I just felt like I was part of a really awesome, incredible tradition,” Dyer said. “A lot of my [current] job is encouraging people, getting them excited about what’s going on. Every once in a while, I think to myself, I’m kind of still a mascot. Except instead of a big furry suit, I have a big black robe I wear. In some ways it keeps going. It’s kind of neat.”

The Greening of Reunions

‘BYOB’ takes on new meaning as sustainability efforts continue to expand on campus

Reunions may be all about the orange and black, but increasingly it’s turning green. From composting and recycling to the Class of ’76’s efforts “toward zero waste,” Reunions 2016 will include more sustainability initiatives than ever before.

The Office of Sustainability along with the Office of Alumni Affairs, Building Services, and student EcoReps are continuing successful green programs while also developing new ones. Here are some of the highlights of this year’s sustainability efforts:

• EcoReps: The Princeton University Ecology Representative Program (EcoReps) was founded in 2004 in collaboration with the Office of Sustainability. At Reunions, EcoReps wearing bright green tank tops serve as sustainability advocates and educators. They promote recycling at headquarters sites and along the P-rade route, where they collect an average of 70 bags of recyclables each year.

• Cup Collection: There will be an estimated 100,000 plastic cups at this year’s Reunions. The EcoReps will be piloting cup collections at select headquarters sites (the fifth, 10th, 15th, 20th, 25th, and 40th). No. 5 logo cups and No. 6 beer cups will be collected and sent to two regional businesses (TerraCycle and Preserve), which will upcycle them into products such as Adirondack chairs, toothbrushes, and other household items.

• Bring Your Own Bedding: This year the Classes of 1986 and 2015 are piloting the option to use their own bedding in campus dorms for a discounted room rate, rather than renting linens for three days. This program is designed to reduce packaging waste from rental bedding. After this year, the “BYOB” option will be offered to all classes.

• Drink Local: Attendees can stay hydrated and reduce the use of disposable plastic water bottles at Reunions by drinking free filtered water from 200-plus stations located in buildings across campus. For a full list, visit sustain.princeton.edu/drinklocal. There will also be 25 large water dispensers (aka “Water Monsters”) along the P-rade route and one near Lot 23.

• Sustainability Chairs: Beginning next year, each class’s Reunions committee will have the option to designate a sustainability chair to coordinate sustainability efforts in their planning. The Office of Sustainability will provide recommendations and tips to help these chairs green future Reunions.

What YOU can do to help make Reunions green:

1. Reuse and reduce! Hold on to your recyclable cup and write your name on it.
2. Recycle cups, cans and bottles in the bins marked “for recycling only.”
3. Mind the bin! Don’t throw any food or other waste in the recycling bins.
4. Keep Princeton’s campus beautiful! Don’t disturb the landscaping with golf carts or litter.
5. Spread the word! Help promote recycling all weekend!

"Still the Best Old Place of All"

THE CLASS OF 1951
Princeton is "Still the Best Old Place of All," and that’s the theme of our last formal reunion before we join the "Old Guard." Our headquarters will be in Forbes College, and we will be wearing the same orange-and-white-striped seersucker jacket that has been our uniform for 30 years.

We will begin Thursday evening with cocktails and dinner at Morven Museum and Garden, with which our class has several special ties. Scott Berg ’71, the Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer of Lindbergh, will visit us to point out some of the highlights of Morven’s exhibit on the lives of Charles and Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

On Friday, in addition to the long list of alumni-faculty forums sponsored by the Alumni Association, we will have our own program at Forbes beginning with a "conversation" between Professor Alan Blinder ’67, former vice chairman of the Federal Reserve and author of After the Music Stopped, and Jack Bogle, founder and former CEO of Vanguard, covering current economic and financial issues. Deborah Amos, the veteran Middle East commentator for NPR, will have a "conversation" with Ray Close, former Middle East specialist for the CIA, and we will have a panel discussion on student life and attitudes — "Princeton Today" — with several students, University trustee Anne Sherrerd ’87 Ho’52, and Vice President for Campus Life Rochelle Calhoun.

Friday’s entertainer will be Fred Miller, who will play and sing the popular songs of our student days. In the P-rade, we will be led by the Pipes and Drums of the Atlantic Watch from Red Bank, N.J. The fabulous Forbes Getaway Brunch Sunday morning will give everyone the opportunity to say goodbye.

THE CLASS OF 1956

The “FiftySIXtieth Reunion” will convene Thursday morning at our Princeton Stadium headquarters. After lunch, Lee Neuwirth ’55 will lead some of us on a tour of campus buildings to examine the unique gargoyles that he knows so well and has photographed magnificently. (Bring binoculars.) Later, Jim Freund’s wonderful quintet will serenade us all evening during cocktails, dinner, dancing, and a sing-along.

Friday morning we’ll be at the Chapel for our moving classmate memorial service and then move to headquarters for lunch, after which Lee Neuwirth will conduct a repeat of the gargoyles tour. Afterward, Jim Freund, Jack Fritts, Slade Mills, and their counterparts from ’81 and ’06 will hear from past and present ReachOut Fellows, and celebrate the success of the ReachOut ’56–’81–’06 college awareness, social entrepreneurship, and fellowship programs, featuring increased contributions from our inter-generational partner classes. Then we’ll move a few steps over to the Frank Gehry-designed Lewis Library for a reception while the crew sets up headquarters for a served dinner and dancing — all accompanied by the Alex Donner Band.

Saturday, May 28th-10:30 am, McCosh 10

*Luther Munford ’71, Attorney, currently leading legislative efforts in Mississippi on K-12 education reform
Hope Blackburn ’81, General Counsel, Jersey City Public Schools
Katherine Brittain Bradley ’86, President, CityBridge Foundation
Andrea Francis ’11, Special Education Coordinator, Department Chair, Instructional Leader, and Teacher; North Star Academy Charter School, Newark, NJ
Moderator: Christopher J. Campisano, Director, Program in Teacher Preparation*

Join Teacher Preparation during Reunions for a panel discussion

Followed by a Teacher Preparation alumni reception in the 1879 Hall Tent at 11:30 am.
Throughout Reunions weekend an exhibit of artistic creations by classmates and their wives will be on display at Nassau Presbyterian Church (adjacent to Alexander Hall). There will be time Saturday morning to visit the exhibit before lunch and the P-rade, after which we’ll be at headquarters for cocktails, dinner, dancing, and the fireworks (which can be seen by simply stepping through to the stadium seating area). Music on Saturday will be by the Boilermakers Band.

We’ll say our farewells at breakfast Sunday morning at headquarters. Don’t miss this once-in-a-lifetime FiftySixtieth Reunion!

“Burning Bright”

THE CLASS OF 1961
This year, led by Joe Prather and Peter Pettibone, the Class of 1961 will be “Burning Bright” at our 55th reunion! Our theme draws upon the iconic poem The Tyger by William Blake, and Princeton’s Tiger. The poem speaks of the complexity, beauty, and power of creativity. For us, “Burning Bright” is an aspirational theme that will be reflected in a class forum, P-rade signs, and our award-winning blazers!

Our reunion headquarters will be in Scully Courtyard — familiar to our class.

limits; and (4) so far, bringing three Rock and Roll Hall of Fame inductees to perform — Motown star Smokey Robinson h’71 (35th), “girl group” voice and Oscar-winner Darlene Love h’71 (35th), and, in partnership with the Class of ’61, Mike Love h’71 of The Beach Boys, who wrote and sang many of the iconic lyrics for The Beach Boys (40th).

The “WILD Life” Class, partnering with the Class of 1976 this time, has booked Rock and Roll Hall of Fame inductees for Thursday at the 45th headquarters in Holder. At 10 p.m., Creedence Clearwater, whose hits were playing when these classes walked to the Commons Dining Rooms through Holder Courtyard, and featuring the original rhythm section that powered two-sided hits and performed at Woodstock, will play music of our college years. The open-Reunions policy will be honored subject to space limitations, with general access to those with wristbands issued by other Reunions, but only through the Joline-Campbell walkway stairs, beginning at 9:30 p.m. Class members (’71 and ’76) will enter through the Holder arch nearest the church parking lot, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Friday night is sure to be memorable, too, as Mike Love and that little beach band from California will reprise “America’s Band’s” memorable performance at 1971’s 40th reunion, playing many of the 36 Top 40 singles he sang or wrote (the “most hits by any American rock band in history”). Once again, 1971 will honor the open-Reunions policy, with general access to the site to those with wristbands from other Reunions through the Joline-Campbell walkway stairs, beginning at 8:30 p.m. Reunion registrants (’71 and satellites only) will enter through the Holder arch nearest the church parking lot, beginning at 7 p.m.

Following the headline show, the high-energy dance band The Right Mix will take the stage, covering hits from the 1970s to the 2000s. We will wrap up Saturday with the Liquid Pleasure Super Show from Chapel Hill, N.C., one of Reunions’ premier dance bands that has played for 1971 after the fireworks for the past 20 years.
Ten classmates will be panelists on various alumni-faculty forums. The class memorial service will be at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Chapel.

For our class service project, we are supporting Community House, which was founded by members of 1971. Its mission is to assist underrepresented children in the Princeton area with educational and job assistance. Volunteers will leave from Holder at 9 a.m. Saturday and return at 10:30 a.m.

Lastly, on Friday afternoon we will cheer on two 1971 bands, Peacock Crossing and Occam’s Razor, which are competing in the annual Battle of the Alumni Bands.

THE CLASS OF 1976
For our 40th reunion, our theme is “’76 Turns Forté: A little bit older, a bit wiser, a lot LOUDER.”

The Class of ’76 is set to smash the all-time attendance record for a 40th reunion. We welcome all classmates back to Princeton to meet old friends and make some new ones.

To feed your intellect, we will have a dozen classmates represented at alumni-faculty forums; we will have a tour of Princeton’s Revolutionary War battlefields (we are, after all, the bicentennial class); and we will hold our own debate on the policy implications of climate change. To feed your musical tastes, noted blues guitarist Terry Robb will perform Thursday night, soul band Liquid Pleasure will play Friday night, rockers The Greaseband will play Saturday night, and there will be visits from campus singing groups, including the Tigerlilies. And, of course, to feed you, we will have an off-campus dinner Thursday night, large class dinners Friday and Saturday nights, and a farewell brunch Sunday at the venerable Grad College.

If you’re thirsty, the class has custom-designed beer jackets for all adult attendees, and hand-turned, wood-fired beer steins for those interested. We also can order new jackets from our 25th for those who have, uh, lost weight since then. The class will honor deceased members at a special non-denominational memorial service. As always, we will march enthusiastically in the P-rade, with help from our own Professor of Cheer, and with the music by the Hillside (N.J.) High School Marching Band.

We want all classmates to attend and offer financial aid to those who need it. So if you are feeling a little older, a bit wiser, and/or a lot LOUDER, we welcome you to the 40th reunion!

— appropriately — not too far away from 1981 Hall. This is a new, larger 35th-reunion site created just for us by the University after we shattered the attendance record at our 30th.

The 35th’s list of activities is also big. It kicks off Thursday evening with a wine tasting led by classmate Josh Greene, editor of Wine & Spirits magazine, then heats up later with a Latin dance combo. On Friday, classmates will pay respects at a memorial service at the Chapel and at night “let their hair down” to the funkadelic sounds of the ’70s 10-piece Right On Band.”

It won’t be all “play” during the weekend. The Class of 1981 will undertake a service project to help some of those in need by improving the facility and grounds of the Education Center of the Princeton YWCA. Plus, throughout Friday and Saturday there will be a host of ’81ers sharing their knowledge on alumni-faculty forums.

Saturday events will include the class picture at Blair Arch (1:45 p.m.), the P-rade with ’81ers carrying umbrellas to fend off the “rays,” and

“We don’t often get hundreds of classmates together under one tent, but when we do, we prefer the Princeton Class of ’86 30th reunion.”

Yes, the Great Class of 1986, “the most interesting class in the world,” will celebrate its “Tres Equis (XXX)” reunion this year with a fiesta eXXXtravaganza. All ’86ers — Princeton’s first class to weather the residential college system — and their guests and children will convene in Butler Courtyard (perhaps now the New, New, New Quad?). We will have fabulous dining and entertainment for Tigers of all ages.

After honoring our deceased classmates at a memorial service Friday afternoon, we will congregate for our class dinner Friday night in Butler Courtyard. On Saturday, we will Protect the P-rade

With over 25,000 spectators and marchers anticipated for this year’s P-rade, please bear in mind the following points to keep the P-rade safe for everyone.

- Use trash receptacles along the route, forego glass containers, and recycle.
- When watching the marchers, stay back from the curb.
- When walking, keep a brisk pace, apace with your classmates.
- To keep things clean and safe for everyone, keep pets off the route.
- Put some locomotion in your locomotives. Don’t stand in place while on the route.

translates to “Tigers Rule” and is a palindrome in its own right. The logo includes the graphic of two tiger heads facing each other, mirroring each other in true palindromic fashion and signifying that our past and our future are equally part of who we are. The use of a repeating 1991 as a graphic element anchors our orange and black Reunions blazer, creating a design that is traditional in inspiration but completely contemporary in execution.

Our headquarters will be Whitman College, where we will fill the weekend with memorable activities for classmates and their families. On Friday morning, as part of our community-service project, we will pack meals for Kids Against Hunger, a humanitarian food-aid organization with a mandate to reduce the number of hungry children in the United States and the world. All interested alumni and their families are invited to attend the event in Dillon Gym. Friday night, we will have our class dinner at the Grad College followed by music by Derryberry & Alagia and The Breakfast Club back at headquarters.

On Saturday, our class is organizing and running the sixth annual Princeton University Reunions Run (PURR), a 5K cross-country run/walk on a cross-country course. All classes and families are invited to participate, and funds raised will be used toward the community-service project. At 2 p.m., our class will lead the P-rade with special Tiger appearances you won’t want to miss. Saturday evening will feature Three Sheets and a late-night DJ as our entertainment after the fireworks. Throughout the weekend, ’91ers will participate in the alumni-faculty forums. Lastly, kids’ activities will include arts, athletics, movies, and more.

Katrina vanden Heuvel ’81 is editor and publisher of The Nation and a popular television political commentator.

A class on Soviet politics sparked a lifelong interest in Russia, where she lived part time for several years, writing for The Nation, The Washington Post, and other publications. She covered the 1989 elections for the Moscow News, and still visits and covers events in Russia today.

Vanden Heuvel has written several books, including The Change I Believe In: Fighting for Progress in the Age of Obama. She also writes a weekly column for washingtonpost.com. She appears frequently on political TV shows, which taps “a different skill set than at The Nation — you learn how to be brief and on point, but still bring your views to the screen ... and do so with integrity and edge.” She relishes the opportunity to be exposed to those who oppose her political ideology: “To debate people of different political stripes is vital, otherwise you can end up in your own bubble.”

Vanden Heuvel isn’t the only alum covering politics in this election year. Among those with a conservative perspective are Ramesh Ponnuru ’95, a senior editor for the National Review, and George Will ’68, who comments on politics for The Washington Post and is a FOX News contributor. Tom Bevan ’91 and John McIntyre ’91 co-founded RealClearPolitics, an aggregator website offering content from all political persuasions.

Says vanden Heuvel, “The role we can play is laying the groundwork for ideas that might seem marginal or radical but are slowly moving into the mainstream of public debate.”

Tom Bevan ’91 and other alumni journalists will discuss presidential politics at “The Road to the White House,” a Reunions panel sponsored by PAW and the Ferris Journalism Seminars, at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, May 28, in the Whig Hall Senate Chamber.

The Nassoons celebrate 75 years of harmony, camaraderie

By Nina Sheridan ’19

More than 150 Nassoons — from Dick Armstrong ’46 to singers in the current freshman class — gathered on campus in April to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Princeton’s oldest a cappella group.

“The 75th was a mind-blowing and humbling experience with a lot of laughs and hugs along the way,” said Douglas Roberts ’97, who chaired the event. “The 1905 Reunion Song sums it up better than I can:

We call the roll
Some men are gone
Our hearts are filled with pain
This makes us cherish all the more
The friends who still remain.”

The Nassoons began as the “Glee Club Octet,” an offshoot of the Princeton Glee Club, in the early 1920s. J. Merrill Knapp, director of the Glee Club (a former Yale and Whiffenpoofs member), is considered the “godfather” of the Nassoons. He encouraged the group to break off and become its own entity, leading to the Nassoons’ official founding in 1941. The group then included eight members, “the originals,” all playing their own role in the formation of the Nassoons, with the late John David Cist ’42 being a driving force.

The group’s first independent performance included a five-part harmony of “Perfidia,” a racy song for the time, at the annual Princeton-Yale Weekend Glee Club concert. The audience went wild for the then-still-nameless group, and members who had planned to quit after the concert renewed their commitment as invitations to sing poured in.

It wasn’t until the wedding of Jack Huyler ’42 in the spring of 1942 that the name Nassoons came about. The group went to the wedding without a name and came out with one, though the members don’t agree on exactly how this happened.

By the 1970s the group had grown to 13 or so members, and by the late 1980s, the tours expanded from locations across the United States to thrice-yearly tours in places as far as Europe, South America, and Asia.

Former Nassoon and current Broadway actor Stephen Bogardus ’76 fondly recalls his experience with the group, particularly on tour. “We took some awesome road trips throughout the Eastern Seaboard and Midwest to many all-female colleges,” he says. “We’d cram four or five ’Soons into a sedan…. I remember we’d locate McDonald’s restaurants along our route. When the cashier behind the counter asked, ‘What can I get you?’ we’d break into glorious four-part harmony and sing the McDonald’s tagline at the time, ‘Two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions on a sesame seed bun.’”

Both audience support and competition for new freshmen grew over the decades as additional a cappella groups — the Katzenjammers in 1973, the Roaring 20 in 1983, and Shere Khan in 1994, among others — formed on campus, forcing the Nassoons to become more creative in their performances. Prince’s hit “When Doves Cry” was released in 1984, and the Nassoons quickly created a parody version detailing the adventures of a Princeton freshman. “Material World” by Madonna was parodied shortly after, followed by the lighthearted “Nassoon Rap.” Since 2000, the Nassoons have gained recognition through social media, music videos, and popular-culture outlets. They performed on Good Morning America and Tonight with Jay Leno and had a cameo appearance in the 2013 film Admission.

Being a Nassoon has had a lifelong impact for some alumni. Bogardus believes that “the experience and camaraderie of the Nassoons fed my love of music and stage performance, helping to push me into pursuing a career in the performing arts.” Currently acting in his 13th Broadway show, Bright Star, he was joined there by 26 ’Soons and their families the day before the April reunion celebrations began.

Billy Hepfinger ’10, currently in the cast of the television show The Outsiders, also credits the Nassoons for his career choice. “Spending so much time with other people who valued art and creativity so highly definitely gave me the feeling that choosing acting as a career was valid and worthwhile,” he says.

The Nassoons have held yearly get-togethers during Reunions Weekend and mini-reunions loosely organized by the decade in which the members sang. Still going strong after 75 years, the Nassoons clearly have created alumni bonds that last.

LIGHTS! ACTION! MEMORIES!
Landon Y. Jones ’66

Landon “Lanny” Y. Jones ’66 was editor of PAW from 1969 to ’74 and later editor of Money and People magazines.

Five years ago, as the Class of 1966 started planning its 50th reunion, a bright idea popped up. We would have a hefty class reunion book, of course, and a class survey ... but what about something truly different — a film? The model I had in mind was Kevin Rafferty’s 2008 documentary, Harvard Beats Yale, 29–29, in which clips of the famous 1968 Harvard-Yale football game are interspersed with contemporary interviews of players from both teams who had participated. Their reflections gave insights into The Game itself but, more important, offered affecting and often poignant insights into the 1960s, the bittersweet nature of aging, and the role important memories of events continue to play in our lives.

What if we could do the same thing, not with football but with campus life? Mix ’60s photos and film clips with present-day interviews with classmates reflecting on their college days. What might we learn about the character of that period — and about Princeton itself?

We learned a lot. With the help of talented Princeton-based filmmaker Evelyn Tu and 17 generous classmates who funded the film (thereby enabling free DVDs to be given to all classmates) and received below-the-title billing as producers, we went to work. I had four years to line up the interviews. I knew I wanted a representative group — not only class leaders, but athletes, political activists, writers, pranksters, gays, ROTC members, and some of the first women to attend Princeton as undergraduates, in the Critical Languages Program. We had no travel budget, so we had to rely on these classmates to come to Princeton, where we would film them in just about every downstairs room in my house.

They did not hold back. One of the few African Americans in our class, John Williams, recalled the fuss made by his friends when a town barber refused to cut his hair. Jon Wiener, an ardent Vietnam War foe who founded the Students for a Democratic Society chapter at Princeton, described what it was like to be outside the clubby campus mainstream. Carl Eastwick talked about his service in Vietnam. John Lamb listed the “three I’s” then used to characterize gay people (“The law says you are illegal; the doctors say you are insane; and the church says you are immoral.”) On the lighter side, T.R. Reid described the hoax he helped devise to admit the fictitious J.D. Oznot to the Class of 1968.

If there is a single theme that emerges about campus life in the film titled, Looking Back: 50 Years Later, it is that this was a time of transition. We had one foot in the all-male, club-oriented Princeton of F. Scott Fitzgerald ’17’s time. On the other hand, sex, drugs, and rock ’n’ roll had all arrived and were gaining traction. Just a few years after we left, the entire campus would erupt in tumult. But the seeds of change were already in place.

Despite the clear difficulties many of the people I interviewed experienced as undergraduates, today they all have retained warm and affectionate memories of Princeton. “Princeton’s charter is strong,” said Williams, in a typical comment. Why do they feel this way? They often said it has something to do with the support they found from their friends and faculty.

What it really suggests, moreover, is that reconciling their Princeton experience has helped these classmates adapt successfully to later life. Our surveys have found a strikingly high level of optimism in our class, both at the 25th and 50th reunions. According to psychologist Sally Witte s’66, optimism is arguably a stable trait, and people who see the positive in situations tend to have that cognitive style throughout their lives. “To graduates facing the world outside of Princeton in 1966,” she said, “there was much uncertainty: careers, marriage, life choices confounded by the Vietnam War, the draft, and social and political unrest, turbulent times. In having survived all of the above, it’s not unexpected that many of the 50th-reunion celebrants would express a sense of wellbeing, strength, satisfaction, even happiness.”

The great pleasure of making Looking Back: 50 Years Later was that we were able to help classmates unlock memories of a problematic Princeton that they valued then and treasure now.

Watch a trailer of ’66’s 50th-reunion film at www.tiger66.org. To purchase a DVD of the 55-minute documentary for $20, email landon.jones@verizon.net.

It has been 20 years since the Princeton women’s rugby team captured its second consecutive Collegiate National Championship. The 1996 win was particularly impressive since coaching for the year fell to co-captains Ashley Kline ’96 and Erin Kennedy ’96. Their beloved coach, Alex Curtis, moved to New Hampshire after finishing his Ph.D. program in 1995, but the team still finished with a 7–0 season prior to the tournament. In the first five games of the season, they did not give up a single point.

The team entered the eight-team tournament seeded No. 1 after a 29–5 victory over Virginia Tech. Over the course of three days, the players faced 30-plus mile per hour winds as Princeton secured a 41–0 win against St. Benedict and a 14–10 win over Radcliffe College.

The women made it into the finals, facing off against Penn State for the second year in a row. The previous year the Tigers roared over the Nittany Lions 20–0. The May 5, 1996, game was hotly contested with an eventual 20–12 win for the championship. With the win, Princeton women’s rugby became the first team in the league to take home two championships (the first championship was awarded in 1991).

Kline is credited with much of the success of the team in 1996, both for her coaching and playing. But the team’s unique bond also played a large role. The women were drawn together by all playing a sport considered “unladylike and brutish” at the time, a connotation they embraced. In a 1996 PAW article, Kline said, “We love this sport because it removes many of the restrictions women normally face.”

More than 300 alumni, students, and friends celebrated the anniversaries of Princeton’s men’s and women’s rugby during a Nov. 14, 2015, banquet. Both the 1995 and 1996 women’s teams were honored. ♦ Adapted and condensed by Nina Sheridan ’19 from a June 5, 1996, PAW article by Rob Williams ’93.
